Winchester Poetry Festival

12-14 September 2014

The inaugural Winchester Poetry Festival has three integrated strands: it is rooted in the centenary commemoration of the First World War and its poetry, and it is a celebration of Hampshire’s contribution to our national literary heritage.

It is also an opportunity to bring together twenty contemporary poets, writers and editors for readings and discussions about, among other matters, the impact of conflict in poetry today. In addition, there will be community and learning projects and preview events prior to the festival.

Becoming a Friend of Winchester Poetry Festival

*The men, the music piercing that solitude
And silence, told me truths I had not dreamed,
And have forgotten since their beauty passed.*

Edward Thomas, Hampshire

Friends of Winchester Poetry Festival

The inaugural Winchester Poetry Festival in September 2014 celebrates the poets of Hampshire, commemorates the centenary of the First World War and its poetry, and brings twenty marvellous poets and writers to the City.

The Festival already has the support of the Arts Council, local business and local authorities for its first year. The Festival is an independent charitable trust and it needs the support of Friends to ensure its continuity, and especially its work in fostering the appreciation, practise and enjoyment of poetry.

Supporting the Festival directly through your Friendship will bring you the company of like-minded people who share your love of literature and poetry. You can also enjoy regular information about the Festival and its plans, and know you are helping the Festival develop its educational and community projects throughout the year.

Friends of Winchester Poetry Festival receive the following benefits:

- Invitations to the annual spring reception with a distinguished writer and to special talks and events during the year
- Annual gift of a signed copy from one of the Poetry Book Society's quarterly Choice books
- Regular updates on the development and progress of the Festival, its programme and activities
- Priority booking for Festival events
